The history of the Mali Empire

- The Mali Empire was founded in the year 1235.
- The founder of the Mali Empire was a man named Sundiata Kieta.
- Sundiata Kieta's family was killed by Sumanguru Kante, the King of the SoSo kingdom.
- After defeating Sumanguru Kante in 1235, Sundiata Kieta officially created the Mali Empire.

- In 1240 the Mali Empire took over the Ghana Empire
- By taking over the Ghana Empire, the Mali Empire gained control over the many gold trade routes that the Ghana empire had previously controlled
- This led to Mali becoming one of the largest empires in Africa.
- There were many notable rulers of the Mali empire but one of the most famous rulers is Mansa Musa the first.
- Known as one of the richest men in the world, Mansa Musa was also very wise.
- Mansa Musa built many buildings in Timbuktu, one of them being the Great Mosque (1327). Timbuktu also became one of the leading learning centers in the Islamic world.

Abubakari II

- Abubakari II was also another King of the Mali empire and he sent ships to South America long before Columbus.
- There are many rumors saying that the first ships did land in South America, but there is nothing to prove this unfortunately.

The Fall of the Mali Empire

The Fall of the Mali Empire

- After Mansa Musa's rule, there were many internal divisions in the Mali Empire, which led to the loss of control of their borders .
- Mansa Mari Djata II gained control back for the royal family by taking the throne from a man named Mahmud, who was not a royal prince from Mali.
- Mansa Mari Djata II was not a very good ruler, and his rule brought chaos to Mali.
- Mari Djata was a minister who took power and brought peace back to Mali.
- Due to the unstable monarchy the Mali empire's power weakened greatly.

The Fall of the Mali Empire

- Due to the weakened state of the Mali empire, when the Songhai Empire invaded they were taken over.
- In 1610 the Songhai Empire assimilated the Mali Empire into the Songhai Empire.

Modern Mali

Modern Mali

- During the Scramble for Africa Mali was colonised by France.
- During the late 1800s France colonized Mali(Songhai) and created what was known as French Sudan.
- France also colonised various regions in Africa, one of them being Senegal.
- In 1959 Senegal and French Sudan formed the Mali Federation, and together they gained independence on July 20th, 1960.
- After gaining independence, Mali had it's first President, a man named Modibo Keita.
- Modibo Keita was overthrown by Moussa Traore
- This led to the Traore regime which laste until the late 1980s.

Modern Mali

- The Traore regime refused a full democracy.
- The rise in ethnic violence led to the opposition of the Traore regime
- In 1991 a coup occurred and Alpha Oumar Konare became president.
- Today the President of Mali is Ibrahim Boubacar Keïta.
- He marks a return to democracy after.
